1.2 Concept

The tendency to develop an adverse physical reaction when exposed to a specific substance, group of substances or type of radiation.

1.3 Mindmap

1.4 Purpose

Information regarding a patient's propensity to an adverse reaction indicates that an undesirable reaction may occur upon exposure to the specified substance, group of substances or radiation. This may be a reason for the healthcare provider to monitor the specified substance, group of substances or radiation.

1.5 Patient Population

1.6 Evidence Base

Not everyone gives the same meaning to the terms Hypersensitivity and Intolerance. There is more consensus about the term Allergy. The term Hypersensitivity generally serves as broader than Allergy. The name HypersensitivityIntolerance for the root concept of the zib indicates that this zib broadly covers all diagnoses that boil down to the patient's tendency to develop an undesirable reaction when exposed to a specific substance, group of substances or type of radiation.

This tendency may have been demonstrated by additional diagnostic tests, but can also be assumed based on the nature of the reaction(s) and/or the number of reactions that occurred when exposed to the substance(s) or radiation. HypersensitivityIntolerance covers, among other things, medicines, food ingredients, inhalation allergens (e.g. pollen), insect venom and contact allergens (e.g. nickel and latex).

The Hypersensitivity Intolerance zib is based on the zib Diagnosis, because it concerns a diagnosis. The main difference is the container 'Agent' instead of 'Reason'. In addition, only 1 diagnosis can be recorded and no differential diagnosis, because a different hypersensitivity also implies a different agent. For this reason, Agents also has cardinality 1.

Just like Diagnosis, HypersensitivityIntolerance has a reference to Condition, because it concerns the diagnostic interpretation of the condition.

The cardinality of the reference to Condition is 0..1, because in the case of a denial of a hypersensitivity or intolerance there is no condition to which that diagnosis relates. To represent that a patient is not aware of, for example, an allergy to penicillin or that an allergy to penicillin has been excluded, one should use the zib Exclusion with a reference to HypersensitivityIntolerance. In this case, the instance of HypersensitivityIntolerance does not refer to a Condition.
